Act to Save Lives: What Law Enforcement Needs to Know About CA AB392

On August 19, AB392 was signed into law. AB392 provides an update to California's legal standard for when force can be used, bringing it in line with the Supreme Court standard already employed by most law enforcement agencies and departments.

Unfortunately, there has been confusion as to what this legislation means and how it will affect California's law enforcement. Dubbed "The Act to Save Lives," CA AB392 has been widely reported as imposing a new, much more restrictive standard for police use of deadly force. Yet close legal analysis of the legislation shows a much more complex picture.

Join Lexipol co-founder and veteran California attorney Bruce Praet to learn more about AB392 and how it does—and doesn't—change the standards governing police use of force in California.

You'll Learn:

- Key provisions of the new law and what they reveal about how officer use of deadly force will be regarded by the courts
- How officers' pre-force tactics will be taken into consideration
- What the new legislation says about officer encounters with people with mental illness and suicidal subjects
